HOMELAND HISTORIC DISTRICT, Baltimore, MD

Welcome to this distinguished Baltimore estate, a residence of exceptional grace and grandeur designed by Palmer and Lamdin, as it awaits its next chapter. 102 Cotswold Road is an architectural treasure—a 1932 English Tudor Estate, set on 2.5 private acres in the highly desirable Homeland /Roland Park corridor. This nearly 9,000-square-foot stone manor offers an unmatched blend of historic charm, modern functionality, and estate-caliber grounds located in one of Baltimore’s most storied neighborhoods of Homeland. The home’s exterior evokes old-world elegance, with its hand-hewn stonework, layered tile roof, and leaded glass windows. A long, private drive leads to the front entrance, framed by mature trees and lush, manicured landscaping. Step inside to discover interiors that have been lovingly maintained and thoughtfully updated. Original intricate millwork, arched doorways, ironwork details, and 9” ceilings reflect the craftsmanship of a bygone era. Designed for both gracious entertaining and comfortable daily living, the floor plan offers expansive rooms, a chef’s kitchen, a music room, cozy studies, sun-filled solariums, and intimate family spaces. The first level is also home to the grand primary suite, inclusive of dual renovated marble bathrooms with heated floors, multiple custom closets, and a gorgeous dressing room. Upstairs, multiple bedroom suites with renovated marble baths provide privacy and flexibility. The second level also offers an original sleeping porch that has been enclosed to house a bonus office room, plus a hallway office with built-in bookcases, and breathtaking views from every window. The third floor houses an expansive fanciful children’s playroom, full bathroom, and wonderful storage areas. Outdoors, the estate’s sweeping lawns, stone terraces, and park-like gardens create a private sanctuary right in the heart of town. Perfectly positioned near Baltimore’s top private schools, cultural institutions, restaurants and boutique shopping, this one-of-a-kind property is truly a rare offering—ideal for the discerning buyer seeking heritage, grandeur, space, and tranquility.
